God sees you. You are not alone.

When War Comes Home: Christ-centered Healing for Wives of Combat Veterans offers comfort and practical help to the wives of combat veterans struggling with the hidden wounds of war, including Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD). Insights from the medical and counseling community are wrapped in biblical principles and the shared experiences of other military wives. The reader will:

- understand what happened to her husband – spiritually, psychologically and physiologically
- understand how her husband’s trauma symptoms are affecting her
- learn how to deal positively with grief, loss and forgiveness issues associated with PTSD
- learn how to build her own “healing place,” develop her support network, and know when and how to find physical safety
- understand and focus on her true identity in Christ
- recognize the real enemy and how to fight spiritual warfare
- learn how she can contribute to her husband’s healing environment
- learn how to construct a safe, healthy environment for her children
- understand the process of moving on to a “new normal”

Appreciation for The Combat Trauma Healing Manual

Thousands are benefiting from the biblically-based wisdom and practical helps in The Combat Trauma Healing Manual, the first volume in the “Bridges to Healing Series” from Military Ministry.

(The Combat Trauma Healing Manual) has greatly added to our understanding and compassion for those suffering. God inspired. – Lieutenant General R.L. VanAntwerp, U.S. Army

This manual is a superb resource in helping our Warriors and families, and helping counselors and caring communities to assist them.... – Major General (Retired) Kenneth L. Farmer, Jr., M.D., U.S. Army

...provides a wealth of material for the care of our military Reserve Components warriors who often return home without the ready infrastructure of a military base. – Chaplain (Brigadier General, Retired) Douglas E. Lee, U.S. Army

I wish I had this 15 years ago. – National Guard Desert Storm Veteran
